Fellowing Connecticut's Example. The state of Maine has followed the example set by the state of Connecticut in organizing Liberty Choruses. The choruses in Main are to be directed through a statewide organization which has just been incorporated. The Connecticut choruses are died. The Connecticut choruses are directed by a division of the publicity committee of the Connecticut State Council of Defense. The Liberty Chorus idea had its origin in the defense council of this state. The plan has since been endorsed by the council of National Defense, and other states have been urged to take up Liberty Chorus singing as a means of arousing patritism and the "will to win" the war. George Thornton Edwards, director of the People's Community Chorus of Portland, Maine, is president of the Maine State Liberty Chorus, Incorporated.
